CHICAGO ATHLETES PREPARE FOR WINTER.

Indoor Work Will Be Feature at the University of Chicago This Year.

TEAM TO BE SENT HERE.

Representatives Will Visit This City to Contest in St. Louis University's Meet.

Chicago, Dec. 13 .- While the gymnasium attendants at the various colleges have this last week been stowing away the moleskins for their long sejourn with the moth balls, the track men all over the country have been going down into their trunks for their running suits, and from now on, instead of shin guards and nose masks, the stead of shin guards and nose masks, the impedimenta of the gymnasiums will be spiked shoes and cork grips.

Football has passed. The track season is already upon us. With this week the indoor meets of the West begin, and with the return of the college students from their Christmas vacations every Saturday will see a tryout or a dual meet in nearly all the important universities of this section of the country.

the important universities of this section of the country.

The prospects for this season at Chicago are bright, and the students are already beginning to figure out how they are to have a championship team next spring. But three of the old men will be lost this year— Moloney, Petit and Place. While so few are leaving, there is a wealth of new ma-terial that is fairly overwhelming. The holding of the interscholastic track meet at Chicago last spring seems to have interest-'hicago last spring seems to have interest ed many star preparatory students in the Midway varsity, and a whole constellation of freshmen entered Chicago last October. of freshmen entered Chicago last October.

With the departure of Moloney, the hurdles will cease to be Chicago's "sure thing," and it looks as if the 10-yard dash would take the place of the hurdles as the event which ought to belong to Chicago without question. The man who stands a good show of making this the case is Blair, who last year, when a freshman, ran in good show of making this the case is Blair, who last year, when a freshman, ran in 29 4-5, finishing only a foot behind Duffy in the latter's great race at Philadelphia. Half milers at the Midway school are likely to be scarce this season. Mort Cabill is the only man so far who shows good varsity caliber. Cabill has done 2.03, and is a dogged, determined runner, who will work up to the limit. Buckwalter may be coached to run in this event.

IF CONDUCTED AS A TRUST."

Views of an Old Ball Player on the Salary Question-What Peace in the Baseball War Means to the Player and Its Probable Effects on the Game-American League Has the Whip Hand and Will Gain but Little by Making Concessions.

BY J. S. MEECER.

WRITTEN FOR THE SUNDAY REPUBLIC. "Did it ever occur to you just what peace in the baseball war means to the player and how it will affect the game?" inquired the baseball player.

There were three-the veteran player, the well-posted fan, and the newspaper man. It was the day after the news had been flashed from New York that the National

It was the day after the news had been fiashed from New York that the National League had held out the clive branch to the American. The fan and the scribe opened the discussion to which the diamond performer listened soberly, his thoughts finally breaking forth in the above query.

"The game of basehall will not be improved by a pact between the two leagues," continued the player rather sadly, "for if I don't miss my guess this new combination will be the strongest ever known in basehall and next spring will find players working for just what the club owners want to give them. The only exceptions will be those players who have fron-clad and unbreakable contracts.

"It's bound to hurt the game, and the class of ball put up by the players in the National and American Leagues when they were at war will be only a memory. There are logical reasons for this pessimistic attitude. The ball player has had his inning and now the club owner will be on top once more. Don't think for a minute that salintes won't be slaughtered.

"Take the case of the ball player and apply it to yourself. Say you are getting a good salary—perhaps a little more than your stipend is cut in two. Are you going to do your work with the same grace that you did before? Will you go the limit for your employer in such a case? The cut will rankle and you will not have the ambition to do mere than what is commonly expected of you.

"I am well aware that many players are

"I am well aware that many players are "I am well aware that many players are drawing more than they are worth and the high salaries now in vogue have been regarded as money thrown away, but did you ever stop to reflect what will happen when the club owners are once more absolute masters of the situation as they were when the National League controlled baseball the country over? Then a player had no choice of a team. He had to take what saiary was offered him. If he was ordered to join another club he had to go. "Suppose, for instance, that I am playing in St. Louis. I am ordered to join the Boston team. Under the old system of gov-ernment I had no choice. Surpose the New erament I had no choice. Suppose the New York club had offered to pay me more than I was getting in St. Louis. I halk at going to Beston. I say that I can get more money in New York. Then the owner of the St. Louis club would telegraph all club owners to keep their hands off me. I write to New York and am informed that the position is no longer open to me. What can I do? I can go to Boston or quit playing ball. I can't even get a place in the minor leagues as long as I am claimed by any other club.

ball. I can't even get a place in the minor leagues as long as I am claimed by any other club.

"Such episodes were common enough in the old cays and they will be repeated if the two lengues get together. The player of to-day has always hoped that the leagues would not get together, for after the scale of prices that have been paid in the last two years, the old system will be unbearable to the stars of the profession. Both leagues want relief from what they call extravazant subries. The St. Louis american League club would like to control baseball in St. Louis and possibly merge both teams into one.

"It won't has long. No organization can maintain a monopoly on baseball. Ban Johnson is the brainest leader that baseball has ever seen, but just as soon as he sets himself up as an autocrat, he will date the beginning of his decline. There are men in the country just as wise as he, and men who can get backing. If peace arrangements would leave only one club in cities where two are now established, it would not be long before another organization would spring up and seek some of the patronage by establishing a rival league. That is the only thing the ball player can look forward to. Mark my words, if salaries are cut in two, it will but the game. I think I can easily prove that to you. You will admit that the class of ball played in both leagues in 18st and 192 was the best ever. A good player got a good salary and he always had a chance to better himself. If he went out and played good ball he could always get an advance in salary the next year. The American League was the heat ever man for the relation of the seal of the leagues was the best ever. If he went out and played good ball he could always get an advance in salary the next year. The American League was the selvation of baseball for it kept salaries up and helped the game out of the rut the National League had run it into. I say this without prejudice for I have never played in the American.

"Take the case of a player who has signed for 1933 for $3.99. Now if the leagues get together that player will be notified in the

Undoubtedly the baseball war brought a higher class of players into the game. College men were withing to play professional bail for a year or two when salarles were good and at the end of that time quit with a good little nest egg with which to start in some other profession. Very few college men would have played bail for $1.200 or $1.800 a year, but they found it no bar to their eligibility in other professions to play for $1.800 or more a season. Undountedly the American League raised the standard of the profession and gave players a chance to make money. After all they are the people we want to see and for whom we pay our money. When the National League was absolute the players were little League was absolute the players were little better than well-treated slaves, for they had to accept what the league gave them or get out of the business. Salarles were cut in midseason and the player had no redress. If he didn't like it he could go to carrying a hod. There are many noted causes of this sort of government. Jimmy McAleer, present manager of the Browns, once had Soo lopped off his salary in midseason when he was a member of the Cleveland team, and he had no recourse.

It appears that Ban Johnson and the National League are running one huge bluff on unsigned bull players. It will be nearly a month before the representatives of the two leagues get together again, and the American League may offer terms which the National League will hardly accept. It certainly seems that the old league is whilped to a standstill, and that it "laid down" last week at New York. The American has all the best of it. Aside from the salary question, Johnson's league has little to gain by making concessions, and I believe that the young men in that organization will stand for nothing that will materially strengthen the old league, which is composed of men who would undermine the American League under the mask of friendship, if these the composed of men who would undermine the
